More information on Active Query Builder Free Edition Calcium, magnesium and chloride activity coefficients across the adult human brain at low pH. [Ca²⁺], [Mg²⁺] and [Cl⁻] are the most important components of brain extracellular fluid pH, and are potential competitors with the brain's only buffer system--HCO₃⁻--for bicarbonate-binding. The present study measured the activity coefficients of the three ions at room temperature across the human brain at different pH. In a mixed-ion solution of Cl⁻, HCO₃⁻, and H₂PO₄⁻ (the buffer system of brain extracellular fluid), activity coefficients of all three ions
