[Species of the genus Clavus (Polychaeta: Clavanina) from the eastern coast of Brazil]. The Brazilian species of the genus Clavus were investigated from the male specimens found in different sites on the eastern coast of Brazil, including: (i) the estuarine area of the mouth of the Capibaribe River (São Paulo State) and (ii) in the estuary of the Rio de Janeiro State. There were found species of this genus at seven localities and 28 localities respectively. The collected data were examined according to the species concept of Clavus proposed by Kolev. Species were identified on the basis of the morphological features of the chaetal anatomy, males external genitalia and internal structures of the parapodia and the coelom. A new combination was proposed for the genus from the Brazilian coast. Species with males not having any parapodial setae were recorded at all the sites investigated. How Will the NCAA Tour Stop at Seattle? Seattle has been included as one of the host cities of the NCAA Women's Final Four in the 2016 Olympic year. The tournament, which was held in St. Louis the last two years, will be held next year at Seattle's KeyArena on the University of Washington campus. The NCAA will have an office in Seattle, in addition to San Francisco, New York, Philadelphia and the Los Angeles site. UW is one of the largest employers in the Puget Sound area, with a staff of more than 6,000 that helps several NCAA teams—including the Seattle Seahawks, which played in Super Bowl XLVIII. The NCAA is looking for new ways to promote the Final Four, building on the first-class production for the event that Seattle is expected to provide. One of the ways will be to rent out 2,000 rooms at the Seahawks' CenturyLink Field, which is home to the NFL's champion team. "It's going to be the largest two-day event ever in Seattle. It will play into CenturyLink Field," said Bogaich. "It would be a tremendous opportunity for UW and the NCAA." The winners of the Women's Final Four will be crowned next June. One hundred and one of 650 strains of Salmonella isolated from food and clinical sources were confirmed as Salmonella by biochemical tests. Fifty-four of the 101 confirmed isolates were Salmonella enterica subsp. enterica serovar Enteritidis and Salmonella enterica subsp. enterica serovar Typhimurium. The confirmation was carried out by slide agglutination with serotype-specific antisera, using the Kauffmann-White classification of Salmonella serotypes. The following tests were evaluated for the optimization of the method for screening for the Salmonella spp. Serovar Enteritidis was identified by the Kauffmann-White classification as Salmonella enterica subsp. enterica serovar Enteritidis. Many Salmonella strains, which did not belong to the above-mentioned Salmonella serovar, were incorrectly identified. Some reactions were performed on colonies (immobilized) but others were not. The results indicated that the final reaction with the serotype-specific antiserum should be performed on the suspension of the bacteria, which are suspended in 0.2 ml of the selective broth in a 3-mm tube. The conditions for the reaction of S. Enteritidis were the same as those for Salmonella spp. When the preliminary reaction was negative, the reaction time was extended to 5 min to increase the sensitivity. The sensitivity and specificity of the method thus optimized were 100%.
