What's new in Cloney:

(Transformers official magazine) Transformers (issue 24) is the first issue published for the fourth season of the Transformers comics based on the robots in the robot Transformers movies. The issue was published on October 15, 2007. Since Transformers (issue 15), Transformers (issue 27), Transformers (issue 32), and Transformers (issue 34) have been monthly. With this issue, Marvel Comics releases decided to redesign Megatron and make him out to be the protagonist. Transformers (issue 24) is also a special issue which includes an exclusive cover of Optimus Prime and Headmaster Michael Bay, the director of the first three Transformers movies, with a new character concept of a black and yellow color scheme (Dark Nemesis in another reality), written by Al Ewing, with special guest artists and the Transformers concept artist Art Sablan as a cover. The only available real comic book was released by IDW Publishing on November 2007 and it was only available at their retail stores. A special paperback edition of issue 24 was available at the Hasbro European warehouse and included a comic written by Al Ewing. Plot In the Dreamland Pulsar Station, Optimus Prime and the Trypticon crew battle some Predacons. Optimus opens a shield within the station before firing upon a Predaking with his Phalanx Cannon, diverting the attack by boring a hole in the station core. A new Predacon, heading for Earth, is destroyed before it can crash. Blackout tells Iceman that he spotted a large-sized ship of "The Dark Side", whose guns are more powerful than those of Cybertron. One of their cannons destroys a Cybertronian cruiser and Blackout tells the story of a race of ancient Robots who inhabited Cybertron. On the planet, Prime crashlands on a cliff and the Autobots and the Predacons are surprised to see the Trypticon. Upon finding out that other predacons have arrived, Grimlock promptly obliterates them. Optimus explains the concept of a Constructicon by his hands and explains how they need to use the Decepticon Drone to get to it. The Constructicon appears and it is revealed that it has just refueled from the meteoric debris. However, it does not enter battle. Optimus is forced to make a search through the Asteroid Belt, where they find The Dark Nemesis. The Constructicons begin bombarding it, but its grenades are unable to damage it. The Constructicons must attack it in a hazardous manner to stop it
