Anatole van der Heijden Anatole van der Heijden (11 March 1858 in Antwerp – 27 June 1933 in Antwerp) was a Belgian Catholic missionary, priest, and historian, known for his studies on the Basque language. Career From a young age, Van der Heijden was interested in the Spanish language. He studied the works of the French philologist, Auguste Picot. This early interest led to Van der Heijden's interest in the Basque language and its history, which he began to research in the late 1880s. In 1893, he published his book on the Basque language. It was published in Paris by Arthus
