Ohio 43219 --- ©eXplormaXX/MID All Rights ReservedQ: Where to create new Model in MVC-5 I am trying to create a new model. This question has been asked a lot, but I am not able to find any solution. My case is very simple. I just want to create a new model, let's say a new Customer in controller. When I create I always get the following error: Cannot create an object of type 'CustomerModel' because it is not defined or recognized as a type. I think it is pretty simple, but there is something I am missing. I searched for possible solutions here. I don't have any references to the Customer model anywhere. A: You have to define your model first before using it in controller. model is for making logic against your database, for example if you want to create a student then student should be defined. basically MVC is a framework you can take concepts from other frameworks and implement it in your project you should go and read a more detailed explanation on mvc A U.S. Customs and Border Protection official says agents detected a woman carrying 11 undocumented migrants in the dead of night Friday, some hidden in a bathroom inside a tractor-trailer. A video posted online by NBC Tucson affiliate KGUN-TV shows a Border Patrol vehicle stopped on I-10 in Yuma, and then a man and a woman exit the truck. Agents quickly came out of their vehicles and surrounded the truck. The woman runs for the back of the truck, then returns. "Smugglers, they're doing this intentionally," the agent says. Agents say a man walked up to the tractor-trailer with a big flashlight, then took away a cellphone from one of the women and walked back to the truck. When he returned, he handed the phone back to one of the women. It was the agent who told the woman to delete the First, a disclaimer. I have not heard or read the whole report of the New York Times' investigation on the late Cardinal Dolan, although I have been reading many reports about it, since it was released last week. I haven't read the text in its entirety, so my conclusions are based solely on what I've read in the media, and I haven't seen or heard anything from the Archdiocese of New York. I did hear that the New York Times said that the Cardinal's soon-to-be ex-secretary, Gerwin S. Schroeder, was the key player in a cover-up of the sexual abuse scandal. He was the one who got the Archbishop to make all those choices -- ones that might have ended in a different and more successful crisis in the Catholic Church. I had to write about this because what I'm hearing isn't true -- and I've heard a lot of falsehoods about the cover-up. I've written about it on other occasions. It's true that the late Cardinal Dolan was willing to grant status to one priest who had been accused of sexual abuse, but it was something he did because he was the victim of abuse himself. [Aside to Mr. Schroeder: The late Cardinal Dolan never asked me to get anyone any status! He didn't care for or see any value in any Catholic lawyer's social and economic status. He did it because he was a victim of abuse. That's who he was. I am not privy to his thinking on this other priest's situation, but I've talked to people who do know.] It's true, but false to say that the Cardinal only did this because he was a victim. I know this from the Cardinal's teachings and his letters to me. I know it from the way he treated abuse cases. I can't stress this enough: He was a victim himself. This is the same man who faced down the kidnapper Patrick Pizzone in Queens, without a gun, without a U.S. marshal, and without a witness. (It was a New York cop who arrested Pizzone.) The Archbishop's letter that was shown at all Masses says that Cardinal Dolan sent a letter to the mother of a child who was molested. He did not do it because he knew he'd been abused, and he did it to console a mother who knew how her son felt. That was the Cardinal's action. The Cardinal is being
