I have some (1,1) matrices, (2,2) matrices, and (3,3) matrices which I want to stack to build one big (3,3,3) matrix. I have tried it and it works. However, now my real question is that, in general, how do I find the largest (n,n,n) matrix I can write as the product of two smaller (n,n) matrices? A: You should find that $(n-1) \times (n-1)$ matrix as a $n \times n$ matrix by placing the first $n-1$ numbers on the diagonal, the next $n-1$ on the main diagonal, and the last on the last diagonal, and the last $n-1$ on the last. For a specific example: Let $n=4$. Place $1,2

I need to set the type of an array of Engine objects every time the user presses a button. In a separate class I have an array called "enginePointers" of Engine objects. How do I pass the value of type to the setter method in the Engine class so that the array is automatically filled up with the type the user chose? Thanks! A: You can use a constructor. class Engine { public enum Type { TYPE1, TYPE2, TYPE3, TYPE4 } private Type type; public Type getType() { return this.type; } public void setType(Type type) { this.type = type; } } //... class SomeClass { public static void main(String[] args) { d0c515b9f4
