Clostridium difficile is an important nosocomial pathogen and an important cause of antibiotic-associated diarrhea. In this study, we investigated the immune response of C. difficile toxin A (TcdA) in the lung. A mouse monoclonal antibody (mAb) specific for human IgG, the major immunoglobulin isotype in serum, against human IgG2a was used for in vitro stimulation with human cells. H441 cells, a human alveolar-like epithelial cell line, were stimulated with mAb against human IgG2a, and production of interleukin (IL)-8 from the cells was assessed by enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay. Our results demonstrate that human serum IgG2a has a suppressive effect on the binding of C. difficile TcdA to the H441 cells, whereas human IL-8 was induced by the interaction of human IgG2a and TcdA, leading to C. difficile toxin A-mediated H441 cell death. These results suggest that human IgG2a may contribute to regulation of the host defense against C. difficile. I have a stored proc that inserts into a table a set of values based on the input parameters. This stored proc is fired by a service, and works fine. The catch is, if the service never picks up a response (or the connection goes down), then the stored proc still fires. I would like to prevent this from happening. The stored proc doesn't have any parameters that would force a rollback if it fails. Any ideas on how to prevent the stored proc from firing if the service doesn't pick up the value? A: add SET NOCOUNT ON A: Set the isolation level of the connection to SERIALIZABLE, or higher. Q: GraphQL inconsistency for GraphQL.createSchema I'm new to GraphQL and using graphql-js. graphql-js has an function called "createSchema" to generate a schema. The API documentation states that the schema is optional and it can be falsy. And the GraphQL.createSchema returns a string. But when i use the function, it's actual behavior seems to be exactly opposite to the API. const schema = graphql.createSchema({ typeDefs, resolvers }); console.log(schema); the console prints out: GraphQL { typeDefs: { type: '__Schema' }, extensions: {}}, context: GraphQLContext { graphql: { endpoint: "",
