Windows Live Photo Gallery Photo Gallery is a powerful free image-management program. It can manage your photos and videos, synchronize them across computers, and stream them to the Internet for sharing and editing. It organizes your images according to the dates you shot them and helps you display them on your monitor, print them in a variety of sizes, or even burn them to a disc. To get started with Photo Gallery, open Windows Explorer. Then, under the _Folders_ section of the menu, choose New Folder. Type the name of your new folder. You can save this new folder in one of your hard drive's drive folders, such as the _My Pictures_ folder, but because this folder doesn't display any data right away, I recommend that you save it in a different folder, such as the _C:_ or _D:_ drive. After you create your new folder, you can edit its properties. If you don't create your initial folder, Photo Gallery will create one for you. To change or rename your Photo Gallery folder, right-click it and choose Rename. From the shortcut menu, you can choose to keep the folder's current name or change it. To open a folder in Photo Gallery, double-click its entry.

Q: Java Game: can't figure out how to use final and static properly I'm trying to make an application which is basically a simple game in Java. Here's my problem. I want to have a level that's generated randomly that is presented to you when the game starts. However, I want a configuration file which is present when the game starts. I have this in the config file: String puzzle; and in the main game class this is inside a run method: String puzzle = Configuration.getString ("puzzle"); Then, in the configuration class, I have this: public static

String getString(String key) { return properties.getProperty(key); } So, the idea is that when the game starts, it checks the configuration file and pulls the right puzzle. My problem is that this doesn't work, as there seems to be no output. So my guess is that I am using the getString() method incorrectly? Any idea how I can fix this?

A: First, don't use a default constructor, it isn't what you want to be doing. You should have a default constructor that does nothing. Then, in the config file, create a Properties object, either using a static factory method or just instantiate it yourself using a System.loadProperty method call. To check for the result in the config, do something like: proper ties.setProperty("puzzle", "something"); String x = properties.getProperty("p uzzle"); if(x!= null) { // Do something with the result } You can use this to set the puzzle at run time. If you just want to randomize it at the start time, you can use: String randomValue = Configur ation.getString("puzzle", "random");

if(randomValue!= null) { String puzzle =
randomValue; } Note: I've also changed your check to use an if, rather than an if(x!= ""), because if you get your puzzle from the config file, then it will always be null if the file doesn't exist. The point of having a default constructor is for you to create an object that is "empty", that is, that doesn't have anything to configure. A non-default constructor usually creates a configuration object. Treatment of female
