2006.Vulnerability in Home Depot's e-mail system discovered by hacker The e-mail inbox of a home improvement retailer was compromised by a software exploit that allowed an attacker to take over a customer's account. According to a report from Motherboard, a hacker sent a phishing e-mail to a customer of a home improvement retailer that suggested he had been locked out of his account and that he should click a link to take control of his account. That link instead loaded an executable program onto the customer's computer. Upon execution, that program hooked into the Home Depot e-mail server and used its administrative privileges to change the customers's password. Once that happened, the hacker was able to log into the customer's account and view an unlimited amount of Home Depot e-mails.

A spokesperson from the company told Ars that the organization doesn't believe customers' information was exposed. Motherboard further said that the attacker only changed the customers's password once and accessed their account for about 20 minutes. This isn't the first time that Home Depot has been compromised by

Rebellion of the White Ghost

Rebellion of the White Ghost () is a 1968 Hong Kong action film directed by Lo Wei and starring Bruce Lee. The film's title is a reference to the Japanese ghost film The Dead of Akasaka. Plot When a young woman, Sera, arrives in Hong Kong, she is kidnapped by the people who kidnapped her. After she is successfully rescued, she regains her memory and remembers that her boss is a very dangerous man: a psychopathic supervillain known as the White Ghost. She goes to find him and the two exchange shots, with the White Ghost being injured and Sera escaping. When she returns to her apartment, her lover, Danny, reveals that he and the White Ghost are the same person. Danny is kidnapped by the White Ghost but Sera is able to rescue him, prompting the White Ghost to turn on her.
