The subject matter disclosed herein relates to valves, more particularly to liquid control valves and to systems and methods for controlling liquid flow through a line in response to the pressure exerted on the line. The need for variable flow control devices in a wide variety of industrial systems is well known. Such control devices can be used to control liquid flow in response to a control input such as an electrical current input. While electric current inputs are widely used, fluid pressure inputs are also known. These pressure inputs can be generated by a variety 6d1f23a050
