1701 Ad The Sunken Dragon No Cd [NEW] Crack

i've had my bearded dragon (bearded) for about a year. i've always had a lot of problems with her, mainly because i'm not a reptile vet. i'm afraid to give her anything because i don't know what to give her that is good. she is extremely picky. she doesn't like any vegetables, but will eat celery or lettuce. she is most active when i am at work, so i can't do much with her. she doesn't seem to like being touched. hello there, i have a 9 year old bearded dragon that i am having a problem with. he is currently in a 20 gallon tank, and is a red that i have had for about 4 years. the problem i am having is that he has a hairless patch on his lower jaw on his left side, and a little on the right side. the hairless patch started when he was about 6 months old, and it has only gotten worse. i have tried everything, but nothing will get rid of it. the vet said that it could be a skin infection, or that it could be something internal. the vet did a blood test on him to make sure there was no parasites, but that came back clean. the only thing the vet told me to do was to keep bathing him and to use antibacterial soap. if anyone has any advice, it would be much appreciated. hello, i have a bearded dragon that i got 2 months ago. for some reason he has been waking me up at night for the last 2 nights, he has been croaking and i have heard this for 2 days straight. i have no idea what is wrong with him. any advice? thank you hi amanda, i have a red bearded dragon that just got back from the vet. he has been there since march 29, 2018. his previous vet did a fecal worming on him and did a blood test. he said he was fine. he also had his teeth cleaned. the blood work came back fine. the vet said that he is an active boy and doesn't need a sedative. he also said that he has no parasites, and that he is a healthy little boy. i took him to the vet again today. he got a fecal worming and again, the blood work came back fine. the vet said that the reason he was having problems sleeping was because he was too active and that was the reason why. he also said that he could sleep through the night if i could give him a sedative. the vet also took a look at his face. he said that it was fine, but said that he needs his neck examined. he said that it could be a skin infection. i gave him a sedative for tonight because he was a little agitated, and gave him a bath. he did not eat anything this afternoon and his poop was extremely dry. i think he ate a few crickets this morning. i only gave him a few because he was a little small for his age. he has been in the tank for 2 days and his poop has been normal and has not been dried out. he has been a little on the large side. the vet said that he may need to be hand fed just to keep him calm.

my female bearded dragon is now 15 months old. she has been a good little dragon. she's eating about 10 or so crickets a week. she also loves romaine lettuce, strawberries, and bananas. i do not know if she lays eggs. i'm really worried about her. i have seen her scratch at the bedding when she gets anxious. do you know what she might be anxious about? i know the chances are slim that she is breeding. i really think she's female. she is a very affectionate dragon and i know she loves me. i'm just worried. i would be happy to hear from you. hi i have a 8 month old bearded dragon named olive. she is almost 1 year old. i have had her for about a year and she has been doing great. she eats 1/2 a cup of crickets a day, 2-3 times a week fruit, and has been having an occasional snake meal. she always seems to get stressed when i bring her in from outside. she has not been eating for the past week and is usually fine outside. i have been feeding her with a ziplock baggie with fruit and snails. i clean her tank daily. i know she is not sick as i have seen her eat and drink and she has been moving around. her eyes are clear and she has good color. she has been scratching at the bedding for about a week and has been doing that when i come in from time to time. she has been eating. her poop is normal. i am thinking she is in heat and it is time to introduce a male. i am asking if anyone has experience with this and what i should look for when trying to introduce her. thanks! a friend of mine rescued a bearded dragon named max. he just gave him to me and i can tell he is a cold blooded reptile. i don't know if he is an albino or white because his eyes are a dark red. he is about a year old and very good natured. i can't tell if he is male or female. he is very inactive and has been acting a bit strange. he has been walking around the house like a zombie and acting a bit odd. he is eating food and drinking water. i recently fed him the leftover easter meal i had in my fridge. he ate it and then started scratching the concrete floor. i picked him up and he started acting very agitated. he is now laying on the ground and i am afraid he has passed out. he is not moving. should i take him to the vet? i am having a difficult time figuring out what to do. i have no experience with reptiles of this species. i would appreciate your help.
