10) A church should not change what they do, unless they are dying. When a church starts going different, it leaves a bad taste for many members. I am not opposed to change if it is done correctly and in context. However, I feel that context should be Biblical, not trying to be trendy. Look at movies. I went to some of these "Christian" movies, and did not enjoy one. Even "Glory" which was not a totally bad movie, was not a movie I can look to for inspiration, or model after. Were done by Tim Allen. What do they have to do, reinvent the wheel? A church should not be constrained by the trends of what is popular. If a church is dying and will soon close, it is okay to ask tough questions. But, I dont feel it is okay to introduce a new way of doing things. Those churches that are new and are "doing something different" in their worship, but it is not Biblical, its simply being trendy. I will add that when a church is helping each other and encouraging each other the entire church community is blessed. When a church is becoming increasingly more like a cult, it is time to get out of there. Second, Im sorry if I have offended those who prefer "incense and candles, mumble" style services. My husband, who is a church musician, and I both love and preach a lot of traditional hymns and we have seen enough funerals to know that they are the most effective and moving services in the kingdom. Just like we realize that almost all of the very best programs and retreats and conferences in the world are filled with people who are completely engaged and wanting to change their lives for the better are I

This is a very well-researched blog post. I believe it has a fair amount of factual support for its argument. However, I do have a major concern with this blog post. I think it is very good that we seek to accurately look into the reality of our present situation with the church music scene. We should not seek to discredit those involved with this research. However, I think that our present-day worship is not nearly as bad as the article may make it seem. Sometimes, I think we can be overly harsh in our judgment.

The same thing would apply for the rest of church leadership. We need to find a middle ground. There is ample evidence that something is wrong with the Church of today, but we all need to seek to accurately name and identify the problem instead of sweeping it under the rug to the benefit of the status quo. I am a fan of Tina for life and I am in awe of her work and her story. I am glad that she is doing research to help us learn more about our present situation. Will things ever change? Only if God calls a wake-up call, even for His churches. Will things ever change? Only if God calls a wake-up call, even for His churches. If you're open to Change, let me tell you, God has another plan. You can have the whole-freaking-house full of people singing, clapping, dancing, praying, responding... and be the worst part of a the Worship band, or the worst part of a choir. If you're keen, you can have the whole-freaking-house full of people singing, clapping, dancing, praying, responding... and be the best part of a worship band, or the best part of a choir. It all comes down to what you do, or do not do, when you're in the Holy Spirit. Always. To you. To me. 5ec8ef588b
