song on: DISCLAIMER: Not designated as a professional. This is a guitar pickup. - To make a guitar pickup, start by playing the C# on the first fret, and the D on the second fret. The first string should be tied on the first fret. Now the next step is to put a second string on the second fret, and tie it on. Finally, play the C#, and tie the other string. The final step is to put a capo on the 2nd fret, put both strings in, and put the capo on it. The song will be played in C. - - Link to

How to apply custom CSS to the newly rendered component in ngOnInit I have an application where a child component (that is created on ngOnInit) requires a parent component. What I want to do is apply custom css styles to the newly rendered component. I know I can use the styling attribute in the parent component. Is there a way I can do this in ngOnInit?

A: You can use the `AfterViewInit` lifecycle hook.

A: As long as it is identical to the query you are calling, I see no reason you could not reuse it. [Selective index based on the "transparency" concept.

Optimization of the colorimetric measurement of the specimen]. The author proposes the use of a set of methods, which allow the diagnosis of arterial blood samples (pH, pO₂, pCO₂, Na⁺, K⁺, Ca²⁺, Cl⁻, O₂) to be made, using a single instrument, without the assistance of a skilled laboratory worker. These methods use colorimetric measurements, which are very simple to perform and enable the detection of the different blood components of the specimen, their ratio and the results obtained to be displayed on a single display monitor. Based on the "transparency" concept, the aim is to simplify the set of methods and to make their use more accessible to the general
