Cool, there are only a few users on the forum who have been in contact with the devs of this game, and all of them said something negative about their game. The reason why there aren't more free reviews is because most of the people who play this game are fanboys of the series. The things I like in this game (besides surviving): -Story, the plot, the fights are not predictable. Most users who have played the game have said that Resident Evil 4 was great, but some of the problems with the game are that most of the things that a viewer should know are not known or known in a very poor manner. Therefore, it is hard to finish the game, and it's just frustrating. -The controls are the same as the previous Resident Evil games. Resident Evil 4 still has buttons that act as triggers, so players will still use the attack button for most of the attacks, sometimes the special attack button. The character is mapped to the X button, but in Resident Evil 4 you cannot zoom in, it's only possible by using your keyboard (and that is really hard to use for those who are new to the game). -The graphics are the same as in the previous Resident Evil games, with minor changes. Graphics are good, but they still remind you of the old games. -The music reminds me of the old Resident Evil games. The music is so bad and sound effects are not distinguishable, so you cannot really hear them. This is one of the most annoying features of the game. The negatives of this game are as follows: -Predictability, most of the time it's predictable when someone is going to attack you. This is because one of the mandatory things to do is have your character equipped with a Desert Eagle or a sword. So, it's pretty easy for the player to see what they can attack him. -In the beginning of the game the controls are almost impossible to use. The lack of instruction on how to play, or how to use the inventory system, is really a great flaw in the game. -Lack of visual and audio quality, due to the low resolution and the low quality of the game. The picture may seem better than in the previous games, but you will notice that in a good monitor, the picture is very bad. Furthermore, the music is awful, and sounds are not distinguishable. -Many bugs in the game. The game has many interesting things, and

He and Ms. Martinez were married at some point in 2003, and Mr. Terrell bought the house in 2006. The house at the Miller Road address is similar to the

Kelley Court residence in that it has a wrap-around porch, the main entrance to the home faces west, and the home is designed with a central hallway that runs from the front door to a back door on the side. The only significant difference between the two houses is the number of bedrooms—3 vs. 4.5. Mr. Terrell, Ms. Martinez, and two friends that they both knew well all testified that the home at the Miller Road address was Ms. Martinez's personal residence. Mr. Terrell confirmed this and testified that he believed it was Ms. Martinez's house even before he and Ms. Martinez were married. In the tax assessment roll, the Miller Road property is listed as Ms. Martinez's primary residence. The 2015 tax assessment roll indicated that the Kelley Court property was a single-family home, and it listed Mr. Terrell as the owner. However, the 2015 tax assessment roll also listed the Miller Road -16- Case No. 11-15-13 property as a multi-family home, and it listed Ms. Martinez as the owner. The 2018 tax assessment roll listed the Kelley Court property as a single-family home and listed Mr. Terrell as the owner. {¶18} Mr. Terrell testified that he, Ms. Martinez, and their friends moved into the Miller Road property in 2011. He also testified that he
