Field of the Invention This invention relates to a digital-to-analog converter (DAC), and more particularly to a digital-to-analog converter circuit utilizing a memory cell array for storing digital data in response to address input and using a switch for transferring the data stored in the memory cell array to the output terminal of the DAC. 2. Description of the Related Art A current steered DAC is well known in the art and can be used for a variety of applications such as use in a variety of digital signal processor (DSP) chips. A current steered DAC refers to an arrangement in which digital data are converted to an analog output current. As the digital data input is varied by way of the memory cells of the memory cell array, the current
