"When we first built Photoshop, our idea was to make the best photo editing app available," said Shantanu Narayen, executive chairman, Adobe. "We've certainly added enhancements to Photoshop over the years that haven't always been aligned to our users' needs, but we've noticed a growing demand for improvements in collaboration and creative workflows. With Share for Review, editing Photoshop files on the Web now feels as productive as editing on the desktop." Photographers enjoy the ability to send their favorite images to friends and family through email, social media and other methods. Until now, the only way to send them directly to their other devices, like the Web or phone, to preserve this "selfie" image was to export it first, then upload those images to the Web and share them there. That's no longer necessary with the new feature. To showcase the Web connectivity of Photoshop, Adobe built a "Share for Web" button in Share for Review that sends all the images you've shared with editing possibilities and allows users to conveniently open them in new windows while preserving any changes made. Importing images with the web-based application makes it easy to copy and paste design elements or layers from other applications, bringing the fastest, most streamlined creativity to Adobe Photoshop. Adobe brings out a new image editing software called Photoshop Mix. Although, this application has much similar features to Photoshop, it has some unique features from Photoshop. One of the most amazing thing that Photoshop Mix has, is a few editing tools such as burn, exposure, dodge, and burn, color and tone, etc. which makes it the best image editing software. Through this software, you can customize your mobile wallpapers easily. All you need to do is to add an image of choice and then you are good to go.
