Photos in this review were shot using various cameras and devices, including the Samsung Galaxy Note 8.1, Nikon D5500, Nikon D800, Nikon D4, Nikon D750, Nikon D600/D610/D3300, Nikon D610, Nikon D5, Canon 7D, Canon 5D Mark III, and Canon 80D, as well as the iPhone 7, an iPhone 8, an iPhone 8 Plus, and an iPhone X. Other devices in the images shot with Adobe Photoshop include the Samsung Galaxy S8, Samsung Galaxy S8+, Samsung Galaxy S9, Samsung Galaxy Note 8, Samsung Galaxy Note 9, Sony Xperia XZ Premium, and Sony Xperia XZ, as well as Apple iPad Pro, Apple iPad Air, Apple iPad Mini 3 / 4, Apple iPad Pro 12.9-inch, Apple MacBook Pro Early 2013, and Apple MacBook Pro Mid 2007. Some of the photos are exclusive to this review (and I'm okay with that). I used the latest version of both Adobe Lightroom and Photoshop. Image editing, including color manipulation, adjusting brightness, contrast, and saturation, was done in Photoshop. Image and video size is displayed with the.jpg (or.tif) format. I used a number of different printing and display resolutions for this review. The main reference designations are 1,200 by 930; 4,525 by 300; 2,400 by 1,200; and 2,400 by 1,920. All content was shot using natural light conditions that mimic real life. Viewing was done on a calibrated monitor and from medium to high "brightness." The caveat here is that the screen used for this review is a calibrated display with a DVI type connection. Depending on the brightness of your monitor and the electronic settings your display may use when picture-screening photos, then it may be necessary for you to calibrate your screen yourself before using the images in this review. Calibration is a must for using a digital camera to its best advantage.

Adobe Photoshop has a great range of color and compression options that allow you to work with a smaller file size at the cost of detailed sight as it is done with high resolution images. All image adjustments can be performed on both the main layers and on individual layers, so you can control how closely your editing will touch the appearance of individual colors, whites, and neutrals in your image. Because many adjustments are always carried out at the image level (to remove backgrounds, objects, and image borders), you can always stay on top of other editing.
